Fall City Day, June 9th

We are excited to be hosting a display by the Snoqualmie Tribe in our pavilion space this year. It has been a pleasure to work with them and we are eager to see the final display. It may include a recently carved canoe, different types of paddles, and wood carving demonstrations, as well as information and examples of clothing and baskets made from cedar bark, and a chance to hear the Lushootseed language.

Plan to stop by and enjoy this rare opportunity to learn about the tribe.

Watch for our new glass, with a traditional Salish Salmon design.

King County Library staff pose with Kathy Lambert and Donna Driver-Kummen of FCHS.

THANKS TO THE FALL CITY LIBRARY FOR INVITING US TO THEIR 10TH BIRTHDAY PARTY!

A varied display of photos was prepared on the panels made available and a table was provided for our Historic Signs display and brochures.

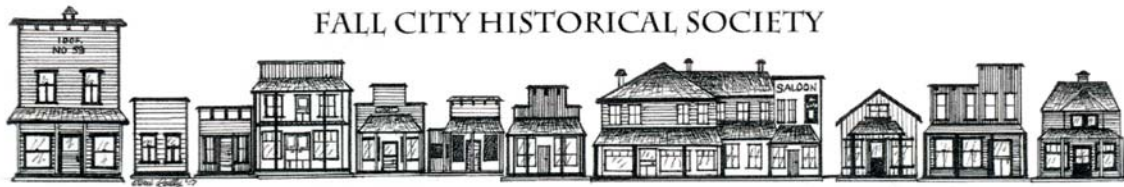

The table display has now been moved over near the windows to the right of the entry, and will remain until Fall City Day. Good time to stop by and see an overview of the Historic Signs!

Our special thanks to old friends and new who were kind enough to donate to the Historical Society during GiveBIG.

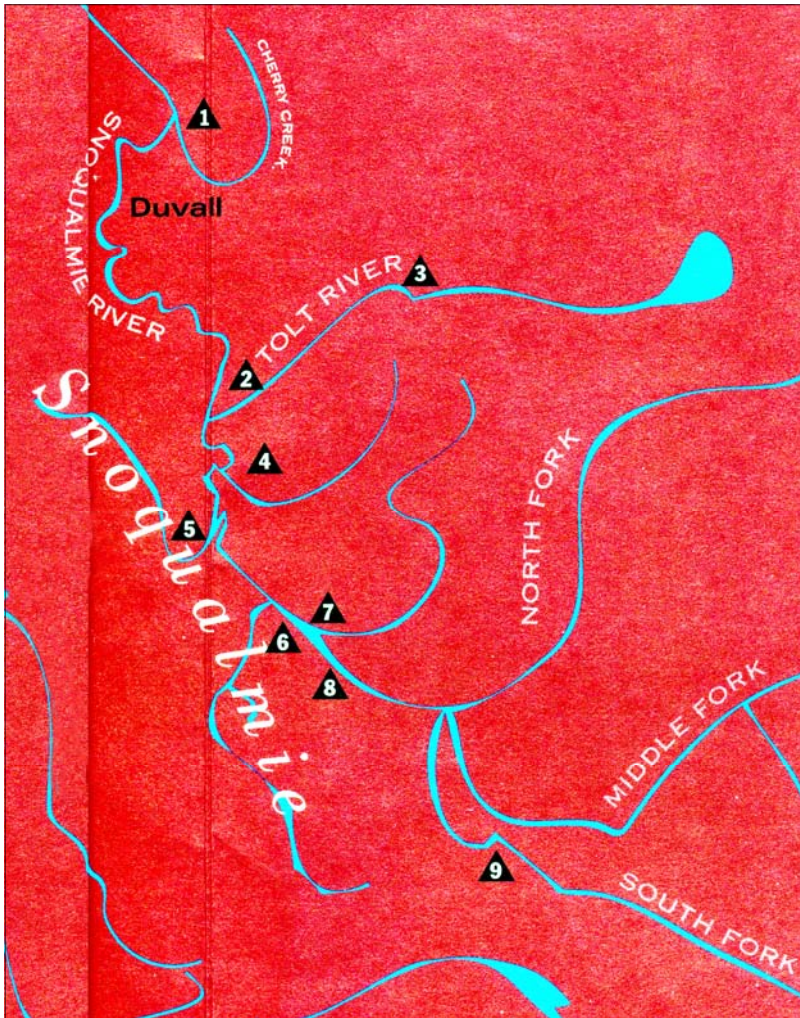

Support for our work from King County Heritage 4Culture is gratefully acknowledged.

First People Village Sites

Before the coming of the white man, the Puget area was one of the most populated centers north of what is now Mexico City, notes the catalog for The Eyes of Chief Seattle exhibit created by the Suquamish Museum. Permanent villages and temporary camps typically grew along the waterways, which provided transportation routes and food. The village sites of the First People noted on this map are meant as a sampling of an unknown number of living places established over the centuries. The few sites included here are documented in published sources.

Snoqualmie Village Site Sampling

- 1 Mouth of Cherry Creek, St^apts.
- 2 Tolt, Xal^aaltx^a, opposite the present town. The principal settlement of the Snoqualmie people, possibly extending as far as the present town of Carnation. This was a good place to fish for dog salmon.
- 3 Stossel Creek, Stuw^a’yug^a, the largest tributary of the Tolt.
- 4 Griffin Creek, Sxa’i i yats, on a prairie. A good place to fish with gillnets. Potatoes were planted here.
- 5 Patterson Creek, T’qwai’qwai.
- 6 Fall City, YelLh^a, the other major village of the Snoqualmie people. This was the site of a permanent fishery.
- 7 Tokul Creek, Tqel, The name means place for soaking things.
- 8 Below Snoqualmie Falls, SqwEd, The name means the underpart, to which the stream plunges.
- 9 North Bend, Saq’oqo, a mile below on the west side of the South Fork of the Snoqualmie River. At one time this location served as a center for ceremonial performances and potlatches.

WATERWAYS

Note: These materials were excerpted from a larger WATERWAYS map and publication created in 1998 by the King County Public Art Program as part of the MEETING OF CULTURES PROJECT held that year.

The Snoqualmie Tribe is now doing its own research to confirm or modify the village listings and to add more information.
