Behind the Scenes:

Hidden Treasures of Washington’s Museums

Ready for some well-kept secrets from Washington state museums? Journalist and author Harriet Baskas, who researches the closeted collections of museums, will share some of her favorite finds at the Fall City Historical Society’s Annual Community Meeting on October 19th. Sponsored by Humanities Washington, the fast-paced, photo-filled and, at times, offbeat tour through Washington history will be told through the stories of museum artifacts that are rarely – or never – shown to the public.

Harriet Baskas writes about airports, museums and a wide variety of other topics for msnbc.com, USATODAY.com, AAA Journey and other outlets. She also maintains two blogs: StuckatTheAirport.com and MuseumMysteries.com. She produced a major radio series on hidden museum artifacts that aired on National Public Radio, with Smithsonian-based historians as her advisers. Baskas is the author of a half dozen books, including Washington Curiosities and Washington Icons as well as her most recent, HIDDEN TREASURES What Museums Can’t or Won’t Show You.

Humanities Washington is an independent, nonprofit organization dedicated to sparking conversation and critical thinking. They use story as a catalyst to nurture thoughtful, engaged communities across our state. In addition to the Speakers Bureau, Humanities Washington provides a rich array of cultural programs, exhibits and experiences to hundreds of thousands of people throughout Washington each year. This year marks their 40th anniversary serving the state.
